

Woman's Officer October report

This month the focus has been heavily on helping fresher's ease into university life with the pandemic and helping them get to know their woman's Officer. Although we were able to hold some mixers and events, due to the Woman's Officer being sick so some things have had to be postponed, the network was still able to create a friendly atmosphere and have very important conversations.

We aimed to get to know the new students and explain to them the role of the woman's officer, so the community is aware they have this person available to them, it was also to introduce them to the various women dedicating their time to helping the Woman's Officer fulfil their role the best they can as it is a big community. We also wanted to spread awareness about the plans of the women's network this year and respond to the community's needs.

- ❖ This month we successfully created various roles to give the community more people they can feel they can reach out to and name, they were introduced via social media.
- ❖ Created a poll and engagement on our social media to give people choices about our mixer
- ❖ Held two mixers, one online and one in person with our own ice breaker questions and they both had a good turn out
- ❖ Answered questions freshers may have via social media and held a suggestions box during our mixer for feedback

Unfortunately, as stated above due to the Woman's Officer feeling quite ill some things were postponed to hopefully this month and this includes:

- ❖ Our collaboration with The Feminist Society
- ❖ Our discussion surrounding faith and feminism with a guest speaker
- ❖ Looking into the colonised nature of the university curriculum
